Field Trip Programs

Ben Lomond Historic Site

Ben Lomond Historic Site interprets centuries of local history, from the life of the enslaved in the County to its role in the Civil War. Student visitors to the site have opportunities to learn local history from hands-on activities and inquiry based tours of the site and learn through primary source documents and artifact analysis.

The site includes four historic buildings: the main house, dairy, smokehouse, and enslaved quarters, which is the only structure of its kind open to the public in Prince William County. The main house is interpreted as a Civil War hospital in the wake of the war's first major battle near Manassas.

Pringle House Hospital: Civil War Medicine at First Manassas

Immerse your students in the sights, sounds, smells, and tastes of a Civil War hospital. Students get the opportunity to try on Civil War uniforms, handle reproduction artifacts, and learn about the medical practices used at the beginning of the war and how they shaped modern medicine and medical practices.

Every Day Full of Work: The African American Experience in 19th Century Virginia

Visit one of only three enslaved quarters still standing in Prince William County and learn about the daily lives of enslaved people at Ben Lomond. Despite being forced into their situation, the enslaved carved their own roles in Virginia's society and sought to subtly control their lives as best as they could under the circumstances.

Rippon Lodge Historic Site

Rippon Lodge Historic Site is the second oldest surviving structure in Prince William County. The circa 1747 lodge provides unique insight not only on Colonial life, but how the homestead changed over the centuries, and those individuals who played a vital role in its growth and survival.

With history spanning over 250 years, Rippon Lodge Historic Site offers a variety of opportunities to learn and experience local history. Students learn through hands-on activities, inquiry based tours, and use of primary and secondary resources and artifact analysis. Relevant topics addressed include architecture, Colonial America, the Revolutionary War, early forms of transportation, agriculture, Woodbridge during the 1920s, and World War II.

Be the Blackburns: Colonial Life in Price William County

Students experience life as it would have been for the Blackburn Family children, including the similarities of today plus the vast differences in responsibilities. Activities include early educational practices, household chores, bartering and commerce, and what children did for leisure.

Native American People of the Potomac

Before Europeans came to the area now known as Prince William County, the area was occupied by Native American tribes. Along the Potomac River dwelt the Doegs, a tribe of the Algonquian Federation. Contacted by Captain John Smith in 1608, learn how they lived and thrived along the coastal plains of the Potomac and what happened to them after European Settlement.

Lucasville School

Historic Lucasville School is the only surviving African American one-room schoolhouse open to the public in Prince William County. This schoolhouse, open from 1885-1926, provides a unique setting to experience what public education was like during segregation.

There are opportunities to introduce the effect of Jim Crow laws, Reconstruction, and how African Americans overcame these struggles. When visiting Lucasville, students gain a better understanding of how education of the past differs from today, through hands-on activities and inquiry based tours.

School: Past and Present

Students will learn about the difference between the past and present in education through the one-room African American schoolhouse. Activities are designed to give students the opportunity to make connections between going to school today versus over 100 years ago.

Reconstruction at Lucasville School

Reconstruction after four years of devastating war meant opportunities for education, especially among African American children. Students of today get opportunities to glimpse the lives of these students and teachers who were getting an education perhaps for the first time in their lives. The story of Lucasville School reveals challenges in recovery from the American Civil War and the Civil Rights Movement, and how it has led to opportunities today.

Brentsville Courthouse Historic Centre

Brentsville Courthouse is an ideal place to learn the role of government in 19th Century Virginia and today. The restored 1822 Courthouse and Jail, 1850s farm house, and 1929 one-room schoolhouse set the stage for a number of unique opportunities to experience lessons in civics and history through hands-on activities and inquiry based tours of the site.

Students gain an understanding of the past through work with primary resources and artifact analysis.

The one-room schoolhouse, which was opened to Brentsville citizens during the Great Depression through World War II is available for a look at education in a rural community through compare and contrast activities.

The 1850s farm house provides opportunities to learn of life on a Prince William County farm, over 150 years ago.

Order in the Court!

Law and order, crime and punishment in antebellum Virginia was a bit different than today. However many of the traditions of this 19th century courtroom are still visible in our modern legal system. Students are given the opportunity to assume roles of Brentsville citizens and participate in one of three mock trials inside the courthouse.

The One Room Schoolhouse

Students learn about life in a rural community from the Great Depression through World War II by exploring the typical day in a one room schoolhouse.

Life on a Farm in 1850

Students learn about life on a farm with hands-on activities, using period items.

Learn about a typical farm day for a middle class family in 1850.

Traveling Trunks Offer A Glimpse Into History

The Historic Preservation Team has several traveling trunks available for teachers to rent that are designed to enhance the classroom experience for 4th Grade and 6th Grade classes. Topics include the County's agricultural history, perspectives of the American Civil War from two specific soldiers who fought in battles that took place here in Prince William County, the African American Experience in Virginia and the life of a Colonial Soldier. The trunks are lightweight, easily transportable and contain all the materials you need for the lesson.

Civil War Trunks

The Civil War Trunks include the following topics:

The Formation of Governments: The Union

Students are encouraged to determine how the political leaders of the day came to believe that the southern states who seceded from the Union had committed a rebellious act by using our country's founding documents: the Declaration of Independence and the US Constitution.

The Formation of Governments: The Confederacy

Students are given the opportunity to compare the founding documents of the United States and of the Confederacy. How were these documents similar and how were they different? What is Secession, what were the causes and was it illegal? What did prominent Southerners like Robert E. Lee and Jefferson Davis think?

You Can Be a History Detective, William Baxter Ott Using primary sources trace the life of William B. Ott, a 21-year-old college student at Washington College located in Lexington, Virginia who fought in the Battle of First Manassas on July 21, 1861.

You Can Be a History Detective, Sergeant Daniel Corrigan, an Irish immigrant who settled in Braintree, Massachusetts. He worked as a flax dresser and enlisted in Company E, 19th Massachusetts Volunteers in 1861 as a private. He fought in the October 1863 Battle of Bristoe Station.

The Life of the Common Soldier: Food, Clothing, Shelter—Beans, Bullets, and Bandages. Students can explore the fundamental things needed to function as a soldier in the field during this time of war in our history.

All of these trunks include lesson plans, primary source documents, reproduction artifacts, and flash drives with power point slides, music, and patriotic stationary.

The Washington & Rochambeau Revolutionary War/Colonial Life Trunk

What did the common soldier in the Continental army carry in their knapsack for a long march? What did they do for entertainment when in camp? What did they eat? What types of uniforms did the different armies wear? Did their wife and children travel with them? The Washington & Rochambeau Revolutionary War trunk will help students discover these answers.

Lucasville School Traveling Trunk

The Lucasville School Traveling Trunk offers students the chance to learn the history of Lucasville School from within your classroom! Through six suggested lessons, use hands-on learning materials to learn about the resources that were available to students in African American schools at the turn of the century. Critically examine primary resources to learn about the impact and legacy of school segregation and learn about how this important part of American history is preserved by historians through oral histories.

Enslaved Life in Virginia Trunk

This trunk offers hands-on learning materials that allow students to touch items that were used to make clothing and shoes for enslaved people. Students can also interact with items that enslaved workers used daily. Documents from Frederick Douglass, John Brown, and others illuminate how enslaved life influenced their views about the institution of slavery. Students will critically examine these documents and answer an accompanying set of questions to learn more about these men and their role in the abolition of slavery.

STEAM/STEM Agriculture Trunk

The trunk offers an understanding of the importance, developments and evolution of agriculture in the Prince William community.

Activities are designed for students in the third through seventh grade. Materials in the trunks cover a wide array of agricultural topics including:
